Today's Gospel: Pentecost Sunday May the Force be with you!

If you want to believe, hang around believers. If you want to grow roses, you don't buy an acre of land at the North Pole. You go where roses will grow. If you want to believe, associate with believers. Watch their actions. Observe their attitudes. Notice how they handle the difficulties of life. They won't be perfect. In fact the devil will point out their imperfections to you. But notice how their beliefs form the foundations of their being. Then go and do likewise. Do you notice how Jesus makes himself known to scared disciples? He comes to us even though the doors are locked. Behind the walls of our being all kinds of things are lying around. Old failures, hurts, guilt, shame. But the resurrected Christ comes looking for us behind locked doors to make himself known. We recognise him by the nail prints in his hands. To live is to live with scars. They are tangible reminders of the times we could have died and didn't. The wounds of life have left their scars. So it is with the resurrected Christ. He makes himself known to us through the signs of his woundedness and reaches for us where it hurts and invites us to believe.
